

SPORTS.

—This evening the Firemen's ball occurs at Cabene's Hall.

—The new school house will be ready for operations the first of January.

—Miss Parker we are informed has accepted a position as teacher of the school at Kind's, and not at Holmville.

—Rev. S. P. Levy, a converted Jew, will preach in the Baptist Church, on Sunday next, morning and evening.

—Christmas entertainments will be the next in order. The Sunday Schools are already making preparations for them.

—The Methodist and Baptist will hold a union Thanksgiving service in the Methodist Church, this (Thursday) morning at half past ten o'clock.

—It is expected that Rev. Mr. Lee, recently called to the pastorate of St. James church, will be in Bristol and preach to his new congregation next Sunday.

—John Hammond, brakeman on a freight train, killed at 3:30 A. M., Wednesday, half a mile west of Sehecks station, was run over by two trains and cut in half.

—Josh Billings says: "the new is better than the old or turkey," but nevertheless "the guss and turkey" will suffer more than the "new" in our borough today.

—To-day is a sad Thanksgiving for Doylestown, and it will long be memorable as the day when her chief citizen, Henry T. Darlington, was laid to rest in his quiet grave.

—The Tea Drink and Supper at the Baptist Church last evening, was a success in every particular, and the proceeds of all expenses, amounted to seventy-seven dollars.

—It should not be forgotten that the Temperance Lyceum begins its meetings next Tuesday evening at Cabene's Hall. Wm. A. Lavery, who needs no introduction to Bristol, will participate in the exercises of the evening.

—The open camp fire of H. Clay Beatty Post, G. A. R., took place last evening at Cabene's Hall, and was very well attended. It is much pleasanter this kind of weather to have this kind of a camp fire than one of the red hot old of doors.

—The song says "You Never Miss the Water till the Well Runs Dry," and it is just as true, that no one appreciates the benefits of the light from the store windows on Mill street, until they try to navigate that locality on Sunday nights when the stores are closed.

—The steamboat business, which was so brisk on the Delaware the past summer, promises to be no less brisk next year, if the report prove true, that the "Titan" is to be sold, and a new boat, the star of the Columbia, built at Wilmington this winter, to take her place.

—The fair for which the ladies of the Methodist church have been making preparations for some months past, will begin next Tuesday evening and continue for four days. It will be held in the Methodist church and will doubtless be one of the most attractive entertainments of the kind that has occurred this season.

—If Thanksgiving day did not occur this week we would be able to give our readers all the particulars of the serenade which, if nothing happened to prevent, came off Wednesday evening at the residence of the Sheriff elect, in Middletown township. The visiting party consisted of a number of Mr. Ely's Bristol friends who took the Washington Cornet Band to furnish the music.

—The Bristol Gas Company offers for sale twelve first mortgage coupon six per cent. bonds, for $1,000 each at par, and accrued interest from November 1st, 1878. It is said that when the improvements at the gas works were under consideration, a party in Philadelphia agreed to furnish the entire amount of money needed, if a first mortgage upon the property were given as security, but when the bonds were ready the person who was to purchase them was not forthcoming, and in consequence they are offered for sale as stated above.

—The Burlington Enterprise records, as a sequel to a slight misunderstanding between some Bristolians and natives of Burlington, that at play last Saturday week, that a Burlington youth was run out of Bristol so rapidly, that the streets and alleys of our town appeared to him like "the teeth of a line to a comb." This seems improbable, even Jersey lightning can't travel that fast, but perhaps the young man had been imbibing his State's famous beverage; this would account for his rapid navigation, as drinking often makes people "see things" with a distorted vision.

Bristol Institute.

The Institute met as usual on Tuesday evening and the room was crowded by the time for the opening, and those who came only a little late found difficulty in procuring seats, while those still more tardy were most of the time compelled to maintain a perpendicular position. A piano solo by Miss Fanny White opened the literary exercises, and a biographical sketch of Nathaniel Hawthorne, written by Miss Bessie Redell, followed. "A Drama of Life," being a reminiscence of the time when Lindley Murray's grammar was a terror to the youthful mind, was read by Miss Lizzie Laing, and Miss Jessie Wells, Miss Kate Thomas, Charles E. Steele and Joseph W. Swain, sang a quartet "The Sea and the Pearl," and "American Haste" received attention from Miss Play, in an essay upon that topic. This ended part first of the programme and after a brief recess the exercises were resumed and an instrumental trio was given by Mr. and Miss Hostwick and Mr. Arthur Collins; "The Benighted Tendency of Human Action" was the subject of an essay by John K. Wildman, and an instrumental duet by Mrs. Joseph Peirce and Mrs. White, next engaged the attention of the Institute. Miss Sallie Hawk read the description written by H. H. of a scene in a Scotch Presbyterian Church in Venice, and an anonymous contribution relating a conversation between "Mr. Brown" and "Miss Smith" concerning a locust and the criticisms upon it, was read by the Secretary, after which the quartet who sang earlier in the evening, favored the Institute with the chorus "Hush Thy Baby," and a motion to adjourn being made, was carried, and the evening's entertainment was over.

The youthful correspondent of the Delaware Valley Advance, in the last number of that paper, ventures a criticism upon the borough council because of their employment of Mr. Shedd to report a proper system of sewerage, at a price that may to the inexperienced seem high.

It might be well for our young friend, whose accumulated wisdom is hardly sufficiently venerable to entitle him to a voice in the borough administration, to hesitate a moment before venturing to publish a condemnation of the action of these older and more experienced men, if he merely reiterates the opinions of others, he may, when a few more years have given him increased wisdom, have occasion to regret his youthful haste.

To older ones, who should know better, some of whom seem to be guilty of similar crude expressions, or, perhaps, influenced by a spirit of captiousness, it may be well to ask, who of all those so confident of their own ability to dispose of this question, ever suggested a plan similar to that of Mr. Shedd's, or any other plan that was not at once met with some insurmountable objection, or any plan whatever that was dictated by any degree of intelligent knowledge of the subject. And why was it that Mr. Shedd, after spending a single day in traversing the town and observing the courses of the river, was able to at once report a system so intelligent and so evidently practicable and efficient that it met a prompt acceptance in the mind of every intelligent man, not an objection having been offered even by the most turbulent? Why was he in a single day able to wholly settle a point to the satisfaction of all, that without him we had been a subject of endless disagreement, and probably a source of great and useless expenditure?

Because Mr. Shedd possessed the information and experience upon the subject that can only be acquired by a life devoted to it, by years of investigation and study, which he has pursued throughout the cities of this country and Europe, at great personal effort and pecuniary cost. It is a part of this sort of knowledge that is acquired that we are called upon to pay, when we reap the fruits of it, as we pay a Doctor Gross from one to five hundred dollars for a surgical operation of fifteen minutes' duration. The council have on this question of sewers, which must be acted upon sooner or later, for the first time in the history of the borough, gone to work at the right end, and will now be able to have a dry ditch plan for the whole town, so that work done in any part of it can be done with reference to the whole.

Whether any thing is to be done at an early day, or when or how fast it shall be done, or whether at all, remains to be decided. But let it now be understood once and for all, that the mills do not need sewers, that the proprietors, as such, do not want them, and never have asked for them and never will.

They have all the drainage they want in the natural water courses which they now use, and propose to continue using.

The recent application to the council did not come directly or indirectly from the mill proprietors, but from citizens who were annoyed by the use of Adams' Hollow Creek for the purpose of drainage. This has been remedied by the Bristol Improvement Company having had a dike from the Worst Mill to Washington street, where it empties into the natural water course used by the Livingston Mill, both being carried into a lower level of the canal, where it meets the refuse from Thomas Hughes & Co's Mill, and all together empties into the river exactly at the point suggested in Mr. Shedd's report. I trust this will forever settle all ill-natured controversy about sewers for the benefit of the mills.

Neither is it possible for the proprietors of the mills to want them for individual use from their residences. The proprietor of the Worst Mill, and one of those of Livingston Mill drain their house refuse directly into the creek, and are sufficiently removed from others to suffer no inconvenience from their domestic filth. The remaining proprietors of Livingston Mill, together with those of Bristol Woolen Mills, have direct drainage into the river, though from the closely built condition of their respective localities, they must suffer the dangers always incident to a lack of proper general sanitary arrangements. It must now become evident that any interest exhibited in this subject, is only for a public standpoint, selfish only so far as the welfare of any member of a community is the welfare of every member and of the whole.

It seems almost an insult to the intelligence of the community at this day to reiterate the reasons for thorough sanitary measures, but one thing is sure, that in closely built districts it is absolutely essential to the public health that all household and domestic wastes shall be removed from the premises and the town before the possibility of fermentation and decomposition.

In order to secure this, that portion of all house lots that receive the slops and wastes must be paved and supplied with paved gutters, that they may be daily washed and empty their contents into the sewers, to be promptly carried to the point of final deposit.

A neglect of these measures cannot help but result in a growth of epidemics and violent diseases. A thorough observation of them will do more than anything else to preserve the health of the town and its people. It is for those people to choose which they will have.

The following suggestions are particularly applicable to this town. Every one should read and reflect upon them. Dr. E. M. Snow, the Registrar of the city of Providence, in his last official report, asks the attention of the people of Providence, and especially of parents to the following facts:

1. No case of diphtheria occurs without an epidemic cause. This is self-evident.

2. The cause of nearly all cases of the disease exists in the house or premises, or within a few feet of the house in which the cases occur.

At two months he developed a taste for beer, and now he is devoted to all sorts of liquor, from absolute down to porter, and waxes strong and fat thereon. After a spree he appears morose and sullen till he has had a drink or two of whiskey, when he cheers up and frisks around in the liveliest manner. Additional potatoes, however, change his mood; he becomes cross and quarrelsome and finally falls into a condition of drunken stupidity.

A high-contrast, black and white image of a vertical, textured surface, possibly a book cover or a wall. The surface is predominantly black with some lighter, grainy areas. On the left side, there is a dark, irregular shape that looks like a shadow or a piece of tape. The overall appearance is abstract and somewhat mysterious.
